Sales Tax Exemption for Electricity Used for Agricultural Purposes

Currently, electricity used directly or indirectly for the production or processing of agricultural products on a farm is exempt from sales tax.

Effective January 1, 2013, the exemption for the use of electricity is expanded to include:

- Electricity used for the packing of agricultural products on a farm; or
- Electricity used in a packinghouse for the production, packing, or processing of agricultural products, including packinghouses that are not located on a farm.

"Packinghouse" means any building or structure where fruits, vegetables, or meat from cattle or hogs are packed or otherwise prepared for market or shipment in fresh form for wholesale distribution.

The exemption does not apply to electricity used in buildings or structures where agricultural products are sold at retail. The exemption only applies if the electricity is separately metered from any electricity used for purposes other than production, packing or processing (such as in a retail facility), or other non-exempt use.

To qualify for the exemption, the purchaser must furnish the utility provider with an exemption certificate stating that the electricity will be used for the production, packing, or processing of agricultural products on a farm or will be used in a packinghouse. A suggested format of an exemption certificate is attached.

In instances where the utility provider accepts an exemption certificate in good faith, the Department will look to the purchaser for any applicable tax, penalty, or interest due. Utility providers that currently have on record an exemption certificate from the purchaser for electricity used in the production or processing of agricultural products on a farm are not required to obtain a new certificate from the purchaser.
